

Keith's Quill

May is the month for the recognition of mothers and for those who will be graduating and moving on to new things. There is an obvious connection between the two. Every mother has mixed feelings when it comes to watching their children graduate. They are so happy for the child and that accomplishment and yet so sad about this precious gift from God making a dramatic change in their relationship with mother. We congratulate those who are moving on with their lives. High school graduation is a milestone. It happens at a time when society itself begins to recognize these 18-year-old people with the designation of adults.

The twenty-sixth amendment to the United States constitution prohibits the states and the federal government from using age as a reason for denying the right to vote to citizens of the United States who are at least eighteen years old. That is a dividing line between young person and an adult. Mothers always wonder if they have done enough to prepare their child to enter our world. They know better than most what these young people will face. Mothers should understand that they have actually only been responsible for a part of what has shaped the heart and mind of their child. Their peers have had a big impact. This is why choosing friends is such a big factor in what children come to believe and how they behave.

We know that school teachers have a major effect on their students. And we certainly hope that the church has had a good influence. All that being said parents are the guiding force. We become our parents in many ways. Children to the most part eventually accept their parent's politics, their view of life, and even their religious views. This may be changing some in our day. But over the long haul after a few years of stretching, children often return to their roots. This is why the Bible can predict that if we train up a child in the way they should go that when they are old, they will not depart from it. They may depart a bit along the way. This is probably healthy.

Anyway, may I suggest that you mothers of graduates and soon to be graduates relax and enjoy the journey. And may I take this space to congratulate those who will be walking across a stage somewhere to get a well-earned diploma. I think those of you that do may discover soon that your parents were smarter than you gave them credit for and that your love for them is deeper than you may have realized before. This is normal. I hope it is for all of you! Well done moms (and Dads)!
